

good week

Three months ago, Tete Dijana was going through a personal crisis and needed to consult a psychologist. He also decided to take unpaid leave from his job as a security guard in Mahikeng and focus on running the Comrades, a race in which he'd finished 50th in 2019. He thought he could do better when he lined up in the 2022 event on Sunday for the down run from Pietermaritzburg to Durban. Just over five hours later, he was first across the finish, earning R260,000 for winning plus R100,000 as the first South African to finish the race. ✘

bad week

Never go shopping with Patricia de Lille; she's too expensive. The minister of public works is about to present taxpayers with a bill of R2bn for the repair of parliament